Dehorning Spreads

Movie makers may soon have to raise their own cattle if they want to show them with horns, for dairymen and ranchers are becoming convinced that horns can become costly liabilities. Horned cattle often gore each other and their attendants. The latest equipment developed for dehorning is this electric dehorning iron. It consists of a 300-watt soldering iron with a special tip having a hollow cone point. After pre-heating for about 15 minutes, the iron is applied over the horn button, with best results when the horn button is from ¼ to ⅝ of an inch high. The instrument kills the horn cell and cauterizes the skin around the horn button. In about five weeks the scab, formed by the operation, dries up and falls off, taking the horn with it. The electric dehorning iron can be plugged into a 115-volt AC circuit.

Tires, Shoes Can Spread Many Ills Among Swine

Truck tires and farmers' shoes can spread hog cholera, erysipelas and other acute swine diseases.

This caution, urged by the American foundation for animal health, also pointed out that hog cholera is again on the upswing throughout the United States. Only by strict precautions, sanitary measures and vaccination can it be curbed, the foundation said.

Spinach Disclosed As General Favorite

Consumption in 1949 To Top 180,000 Tons

Whatever may be the generally accepted idea to the contrary, Americans like spinach. This year they will eat about 180,000 tons of the bright green leaf, a fact which should concern most farmers. Consumers will use spinach from their own gardens, bought over grocers' counters as fresh greens, or in frozen or canned forms.

That 180,000-ton figure may be a conservative estimate, for it includes only the estimated size of the commercial crop. The figure is well under the quarter-million-ton crops of recent food rationing years, but compared with prewar production, however, it shows, according to a National Geographic Society survey, that spinach is holding its own in national competition with pot-herb greens.

As much spinach as the markets will take is sold fresh. Last year, for example, 114,000 tons of spinach were shipped to fresh markets from coast to coast. The rest — about 49,000 tons — matured for the most part when fresh markets were supplied. It went to processors at prices lower than the fresh-market level, and became the year's pack — canned and quick frozen.

Texas' renowned Winter Garden area of huge truck crops leads the nation in producing spinach for fresh-market sale. Spinach leaves grow best where soil is rich, water is plentiful, weather is cool without frost, and days are short. The Winter Garden country touching the Rio Grande 130 miles southwest of San Antonio provides these conditions from November to April when most growing areas have too much frost.

A sheep and goat ranging area until 1920, the Winter Garden, thanks to irrigation, now covers five counties. It pours forth onions, cabbages, potatoes, lettuce, spinach, beets, peas and beans in late winter when they bring top prices.

Eagle Pass on the Rio Grande, Crystal City, and Carrizo Springs are its busy centers of spinach shipping in season. At Crystal City, growers in 1937 erected a heroic-size plaster statue of their special hero, Popeye the Sailor.

Near Eagle Pass, one of the biggest onion growers switched gradually to spinach 20 years or more ago. Riding on a national trend to spinach, source of iron, calcium, and vitamins A and C, he increased plantings.

Early Rising Beneficial To Those Under Surgery
CHICAGO.—Early rising after operations tends to prevent weakness, diminishes pain and would accelerate convalescence, according to Dr. J. B. Blodgett, Boston, writing in the Journal of the American Medical association.
Blodgett studied 504 cases in which early rising was practiced and 608 cases in which the patients remainkd in bed at least seven days after their operations.
Wound disruption after abdominal operations occurred in 2.7 per cent of the late-rising group, while the incidence in the early-rising group was 1.2 per cent. Wound infection among the early risers was 2.8 per cent, compared to 4.4 per cent among the late risers.

English Village Pays Bills With Nothing but Its Sand
SEDGEFOLD, ENGLAND.—This Norfolk village runs on sand.
The 700 villagers haven't paid a penny in local taxes in 15 years.
The tax rate is fixed at eight pence on a pound's worth of real estate, but it hasn't been collected.
Sedgeford has paid all its expenses and made enough extra to refurbish the war memorial and start a new athletic field by selling natural resources—sand from a village-owned sandpit.

Neighbors Cheer as Law Nabs Juke-Box Operator
COMPTON, CALIF.—Bar proprietor Willie Jackson's protests that he didn't know there was a curfew on juke boxes did him absolutely no good as he went to jail for keeping the music box going after two o'clock in the morning.
Neighbors cheered as officers booked Jackson on charges of disturbing the peace and led him off to jail. They had visions of uninterrupted sleep in the future.

MR. J. NORVELL WOODSON
J. Norvell Woodson, 67, a native of this county, but for many years a resident of Richmond, died in that city on July 26, at Johnston-Willis Hospital. He was the son of the late James and Bettie Harris Woodson, both of this county, and was widely relvted in this section. He had been for a number of years a very successful merchant and was a member of Grace Presbyterian Church.
Mr. Woodson is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mattie Wright Woodson; two daughters, Mrs. E. H. Harris, and Mrs. H. L. Bullock, and one son, Wilbur H. Woodson, all of Richmond. Funeral services were conducted at Bliley's Funeral Home followed by interment in Riverview Cemetery.
